Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a hologram recording medium, a hologram recording and reproducing apparatus, a hologram recording and reproducing method, and a program and, more particularly, to a hologram recording medium suitable for recording holograms using a light beam of a high light intensity, a hologram recording and reproducing apparatus, a hologram recording and reproducing method, and a program. 2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, a hologram is recorded as an interference pattern, and a reproducing light beam (object beam) is projected so as to intersect with the recording medium (hologram recording medium). At this time, the hologram can be reproduced by utilizing the interference of the object beam and the reproducing light beam reflected in the recording medium and transmitted therefrom and passes the recording medium. However, when the object beam is a light beam of high light intensity, the object beam and the reproducing beam are not received by the photodetecting element because of damages or destruction of the hologram recording medium. For example, a hologram is recorded in a recording medium of a polycarbonate type sheet using a 3e33713323
