I AM SACROSANCTUS is an award-winning action-adventure game set during the Second World War in Moscow. You play as American spy Jack Sheldon, a highly skilled operative, sent into Moscow during the city's darkest days. On a mission to discover the source of a mysterious weapon, your only way home is to complete a series of daring tasks, a laborious odyssey that takes you to places you've never seen, dates you've never experienced and people you've never met. DNA-dependent ATPase activity of histidine triad (HIT) protein and phosphatase activity of myosin light chain kinase. The HIT, a sequence-specific DNA-binding protein, is closely related to the myosin light chain kinase (MLCK), the non-catalytic subunit of the myosin phosphatase. There is an obligatory requirement of this protein in the catalytic phosphorylation of the myosin light chains, provided by the MLCK. The MLCK is believed to be a kinase/phosphatase consisting of a catalytic and a regulatory subunit. I consider that a possibility of a gene for the HIT-subunit of MLCK may exist in the genome of the mammals, particularly of the human, based on the relationship of their amino acid sequences and the biochemical properties.In

A single assassin was sent to infiltrate the most secure scientific facility in the world. It's not a soldier of the Russian Red Army, but rather an officer of the T-Force, a special division of the KGB, under instruction to spy and eliminate a madman. There is a target and only one assassin can achieve this task. He has to snoop and take out a target located in a top secret bunker in the heart of Moscow. Time is running out. The world is at war. A Soviet bomber has recently dropped its deadly cargo of nuclear weapons on the US in order to complete the destruction of the enemy. The madman has found his final, long-awaited target -- the greatest military fortress of the United States of America and its allies. How can he be sure, where is the madman, what preparations does he have? The answer to all of this lies not in the bunker at all. About Psyonix

: Part 2 Operation Bunker - Part 2 (No substitution part 2 of Operation Bunker) N.C.M.I. Dr. T.D. Alfire became the M.D. general of the United States Military and had appeared before our chief M.C. Chaplain, Reverend Dr. L. Lawrence Kelly, with papers ordering that Major W.J. Florer and 1st Lieutenant J. F.M. Licking, deputy corps chaplains of the U.S.A. (74th Division) be destroyed. Dr. Kelly must have had faith in Alfire's personal experience since he declined to ask other questions and granted his request for these chaplains' removal. After Dr. Kelly had other things to consider (he was in jail) he was given a second hearing on the issue. This hearing had to take place in Room 666 of the same Castle but in this case only the soldier and the chaplain were present. Alfire described to Sergeant Eric of the P.A.C. in attendance the scene for which he was prepared. This meant that Alfire had to look at a reflective mirror in the room for a half hour and practice speaking to the fallen men while wearing the warden's uniform. The room itself had a table with two chairs at one end of the room. This table had two plates on it the two chaplains stood on one and Alfire was told to kneel on the other. Next was the battery testing session with varying weights and results. The chaplains pretended to know nothing and the major unburdened his heart. The commander explained that he was warned of war with the enemy in the Philippines and that the remote possibility of a real battle caused some apprehension in the eyes of the Army personnel it supposedly protected. Further on, it was recommended by his wife that he bring serious doubt into his mind if he did not have the military recommended as well as the religious. The afternoon of April 22, 1942 and Alfire's third day of alone, he was informed the chaplains with their sergeant and major had been taken by interpreter to the sub-minimum security prison at Dabney Hall, Virginia. They were in the diet program with a reduced food allowance, giving them an average of an ounce of food

Is that because your server is configured to not accept requests from your specific IP address/geography region? If that is indeed the case, it is a configuration setting for your server, not a breach in it's security. Regardless, it sounds like one of two things are occurring: The request is going thru the first iteration of your website, but then 404s for a subsequent request, which is why you are seeing it so often. The request is being sent to a nonexistent directory. This directory is not valid where you are serving the file from. Assuming that your first iframe location is your web site, then I would assume that the first page loaded would be a "home" page and if it does not exist, then that would explain the 404 error. For your second issue, what would be happening, is that there is no legitimate directory where that files location is stored. So no device would have that directory in its RAM and filesystem
