has said he won't seek re-election, told Fox News on Tuesday that he still thinks New Hampshire Republican John McCain beat Barack Obama in 2008 and Mitt Romney in 2012 — and that he'd run against Hillary Clinton if she decides to run. "I won't go out," Kasich told Fox News' Bret Baier, "but I do think they lost to Hillary in 2016. Hillary ran against a Republican, they said they were gonna run a different campaign. They didn't, they ran a campaign against Obama. I don't think they were ready. Hillary won in the Rust Belt states, and she won in the states that she won. She won West Virginia, she won Ohio. "But if Hillary runs, I would run," he continued. "I think I would run against her for reasons of principle. Because I think she's trying to destroy the Republican Party as we know it." Asked if he thinks McCain, who is currently battling brain cancer, would have won if he were alive, Kasich said, "I do think that." Asked what impact he thinks McCain's cancer has had on his post-campaign plans, Kasich said, "I don't know. He's been in a lot of pain. He's been sick. How important do I think that is? I don't know."

Kasich also weighed in on the current political climate, and his role as a congressman in the 1990s during the impeachment of Bill Clinton. Kasich said he didn't think Clinton should have been impeached, but he also called the impeachment process "political" and said that it's important to uphold the Constitution. "I thought the president was not doing what he should be doing, but I don't think it was in the Constitution d0c515b9f4
