Comparison of bone scanning, radiography, and ultrasonography in the diagnosis of avascular necrosis of the femoral head. We evaluated the efficiency of bone scanning, radiography, and ultrasonography as diagnostic techniques in the detection of avascular necrosis of the femoral head. In this observational study, one hundred twenty-five patients with clinically suspected avascular necrosis of the femoral head were examined by bone scanning, plain radiographs of the hips, and ultrasonography of the hips. We found that, in addition to the radiographs, scanning and ultrasonography had a higher accuracy in the detection of avascular necrosis of the femoral head than plain radiography. Furthermore, scanning and ultrasonography are better, cheaper, and more accessible diagnostic tools than plain radiography and thus may be used instead. The element itself is not a table, and the browser is marking it as such to tell you that it's a deprecated element for something more appropriate.
