Epigenetic regulation of cellular differentiation by Wnts in stem cell biology and human disease. Growth factors and their receptors have essential roles in the generation and maintenance of stem cells and their derivatives. Wnt proteins and their receptors are key mediators of the effect of these growth factors in stem cell biology. In addition to their essential role in stem cell biology, many human diseases are directly related to mutations in Wnt signaling components. In this review, we provide an overview of the basic biology of Wnt proteins and the cellular functions of Wnt signaling, and then discuss the relationship between Wnt signaling and stem cell differentiation, pluripotency, and
